

2015

Mid-February

Megan Lester

Follow this and additional works at: <http://pilotscholars.up.edu/writersmag>

Part of the Arts and Humanities Commons

Recommended Citation

Lester, Megan (2015) "Mid-February," Writers Magazine: Vol. 1, Article 15.

Available at: <http://pilotscholars.up.edu/writersmag/vol1/iss1/15>

This Article is brought to you for free and open access by Pilot Scholars. It has been accepted for inclusion in Writers Magazine by an authorized administrator of Pilot Scholars. For more information, please contact library@up.edu.

Mid-February

BY MEGAN LESTER

Noticing a black pool on the ground,
I stretch my hand over the darkness, expecting to see my arm reflected in a puddle.

But the black pool was a shadow,
and my hand another shadow, making a blacker silhouette
in the not-puddle.

A brief disappointment.
I had wanted to see my arm waving up at its twin.

How much, I thought could be held in a pool of water.